

MOBOTIX maintains business operations

With a dedicated action plan, MOBOTIX maintains business operations in the wake of the Corona/COVID-19 crisis

el 19 de marzo de 2020

As a global company, MOBOTIX AG will be implementing a mitigating action plan to protect employees, their families, customers and business partners.

"With this plan, we will be ensuring external communication, internal processes and the continuation of production and shipping," says CEO Thomas Lausten. He adds: “In doing so, we are of course following the advice and requirements of the German government and the relevant authorities. As a company, we are doing our best reduce any potential risk this virus causes.”

Most MOBOTIX teams will work in the home office immediately and until further notice. Customer service, technical support etc. are running as usual with connections from home via email, video and telephone. Business travel is largely avoided. Colleagues who return from any travels will initially remain at home for 2 weeks. The company is in constant contact with the health authorities and the company doctor to maintain the best levels of protection and mitigation.

Strict hygiene and behavioral rules as recommended by authorities are in place across all offices internationally and in all departments including the production and shipping, so that the risk is minimized. Production is optimised for the increased demand in requirements especially in MOBOTIX thermal solutions which are being used for temperature monitoring.

“However, like many other companies, MOBOTIX is dependent on external conditions. When changes occur we will inform customers and business partners. We hope that this exceptional global situation can be contained and overcome as quickly as possible,” concludes Lausten.
